DC students celebrate Earth Day with community cleanup

Decatur Central students celebrated Earth Day by turning out in force for the school's community cleanup.

Submitted article

On April 22, as the world celebrated Earth Day, Decatur Central High School students took action to make a tangible difference in their community.

More than 130 motivated students from Decatur Township united for a student-led community cleanup initiative aimed at tackling litter and debris along eight designated routes in the community.

Students and chaperones spent two hours collecting approximately 150 bags of trash and large debris.

This event, coordinated by Justin Dixson, DC director of athletics, and Jessica Sandvold, DC teacher and SOAR (Support, Organize, Advocate, Represent) Club Sponsor, embodies the spirit of community engagement and environmental stewardship. The cleanup effort is co-sponsored annually by the DC athletic department and the Decatur Township Drug-Free Coalition.

"Giving our students a way to give back to their community with visible immediate impact is one of the goals of this event," said Sandvold. "The awareness that the cleanup brings to residents and those passing through is priceless. We have noticed, especially this year, that the amount of trash cleaned up along our routes has significantly decreased.

"Positive changes within our community are needed and we are fortunate enough to be supported by our school district, countless chaperones, emergency personnel, and school district employees who all help make this event possible."

Rare IndyCar controversy taints The Penske Way

By Al Stille
Editor

The Penske Way made its IndyCar debut in 1968 and was seen at the Indianapolis 500 for the first time a year later.

Team owner Roger Penske introduced a highly professional way of approaching motorsports that has resulted in 19 Indianapolis 500 triumphs, more than 230 race wins, nearly 300 poles, and 17 national championships just in IndyCar.

Through countless interviews, Penske has repeatedly emphasized that "people equity" is the foundation of his various business and motorsports success. When Penske's drivers, crew chiefs or team personnel are in front of the media, the presentation is positive – always about the team and how they go about being successful. The Penske Way is tried and true.

That's why the recent disqualification of Team Penske's 1-3 finish of Josef Newgarden and Scott McLaughlin in the first IndyCar race of the season at St. Petersburg stunned the motorsports world last week. Fourth-place Will Power was docked 10 points. The announcement was made April 24. IndyCar officials penalized Team Penske for having the push-to-pass system available for use on starts and restarts which is against the rules. The system, according to Team Penske president Tim Cindric, was used during a pre-season hybrid test and never recoded. The oversight was discovered before the Long Beach race in all three Team Penske entries.

Controversy is indeed rare and is detrimental to The Penske Way. Friday morning during a presser at Barber Motorsports Park, Newgarden emotionally confessed.

"I used push to pass at an unauthorized time twice on two different restarts," the reigning Indianapolis 500 winner said. "There's only one person sitting in the car, it's Reigning Indianapolis 500 winner Josef Newgarden accepted blame last week for rules violation that stripped him of season-opening win at St. Petersburg for Team Penske.

just me. So that responsibility and the use of the push to pass in the correct manner falls completely on me. It's my responsibility to know the rules and regulations at all points and make sure that I get that right. With that regard, I failed my team miserably."

Newgarden then apologized to the team's fans, partners, teammates, and the competitors.

"For me, it's an embarrassing situation to have to go through," he added. "It's demoralizing in a lot of ways."

Newgarden also said that he talked with Penske earlier in the week and "he did not take it well, whatsoever as you can imagine."

Penske not only owns Team Penske but also owns the Indianapolis Motor Speedway and the NTT IndyCar Series through Penske Entertainment Corp. Penske made the purchase in 2019 and has guided IMS and the series through the Covid pandemic and to rejuvenated prestige.

Penske also met briefly with IndyCar team owners Saturday morning to go over the incident that tainted Team Penske as IndyCar teams now prepare for the SONSIO Grand Prix Saturday, May 11 and the Indianapolis 500 Sunday, May 26, at IMS.

Sunday, Team Penske returned to its winning ways as McLaughlin and Power finished 1-2 in the Children of Alabama Grand Prix to finish a difficult week on a positive note. Newgarden was 16th.

"There was never a lack of belief," McLaughlin said after the race. "I'm more proud of just the people aspect of it, the way we just stuck together. We took the penalty, as we said at the start of the week. It was black and white and you move on."

Team Penske president Tim Cindric said the push to pass violations were unintentional, but as Newgarden pointed out in his remarks Friday, there is no way to deviate from the "high standard" of The Penske Way.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Southport mayor disappointed with sentencing of murderer of officer Breann Leath

To the Editor:
 The sentence handed down to the convicted murderer of the IMPD police officer Breann Leath is very disappointing. The sentence was time served of approximately four years. The trial and sentencing send a very negative signal to police officers in Marion County and the entire State of Indiana. Police officers place their lives on the line for the public each day they work their shift. The legal system and the public need to support our police officers now more than ever given the current attitudes in society against police officers.

The City of Southport partners with its police department and is very proud of the men and women that serve and protect Southport citizens. Support from the legal system by handing down appropriate sentencing to convicted criminals will send a signal to all police officers saying we value your lives and the work that you are doing to protect and serve the public. Please make your voices heard in the Primary Election and General Election by supporting judges and political candidates that support the police.

FIXING A FLAT TIRE

Last week, I experienced an interesting problem with my car. On Wednesday evening, as I was driving home, I thought I was feeling a vibration in the car while I was driving on a fairly smooth stretch of road. I was close to home, and I did not notice it again that evening.

On Thursday afternoon, I had some errands to run. Once I drove out onto Madison Avenue, I again noticed that vibration once again. I put down my driver's side window and also heard a loud thumping noise.

The noise was connected with the speed of the car. The faster I drove, the quicker and louder came the noise. It seemed like the Lone Ranger was following me while riding on his famous horse, Silver. I finished all my errands and drove home. The noise was still with me.

Once I was parked in our driveway, I decided I would take a look at the tires. I started with the tire that seemed close to the noise. As I slid my hand over the tread of the left-rear tire, I felt the head of a hex-head cap screw.

I got a flashlight and looked at it. It was into the tire's tread perfectly. It looked like it had been installed with a wrench. I poured some water around it, and I saw no evidence of air coming out.

Later, after Lyn came home, she followed me up to Kevin's Auto Repair. I explained about my tire problem and left the car for them to check out and hopefully repair. My thoughts were that I would be purchasing a new tire very soon.

In about an hour, we received a call to tell me that my car was ready to be picked up. The tire had been fixed with a plug. We drove back to Kevin's, and I picked up my car. They even saved me the bolt that was found in my tire.

As I drove home, I started thinking about the days when my father had his service station. I repaired hundreds of tires during those years. At that time, there was no way that I could have repaired a tire with that size hole in the tread.

I have not driven my car much these past few days. I have checked the tire pressure, and it is holding perfectly.

Last Saturday, during the warm afternoon, I was sitting out on our front patio enjoying the day. I called my good friend, Richard Smith. He and his wife, Marsha live in New Braunfels, Texas. They come up here in the summer. I wanted to get the dates that they would be here so we could put together a small party.

For many years, Richard has claimed that he had been an employee of a railroad. He has shared many train stories. We have always thought he was probably a very skilled caboose floor sweeper.

While we were chatting on the telephone, Richard stopped me and asked if a train was traveling close on the railroad track just west of us. I heard a train whistle and then noticed that the wind was coming from the west and was carrying the noise of the train.

Richard could hear the train over the telephone and that caused no further conversation until the train was much further down the track.

Some things never change.

Roncalli tops CG in softball duel; Marion County tourneys begin Friday

By Al Stille
Editor

Roncalli's softball team showed their power and speed early last week at rival Center Grove.

The Royals slammed two home runs as pitcher Avery Clark gave up only four hits April 22 in a 7-3 road win. Roncalli has won seven straight games and is 14-1.

Roncalli struck in the first inning as Elise Baker scored from third on a bases loaded walk to Emma Fagen.

Then Bennie Leffler delivered a bases-loaded home run over left-center field off pitcher Riley Fuhr for a commanding and somewhat startling 5-0 lead.

"I was looking for the pitch she threw me," Leffler said. "It was a little bit inside, a really nice pitch so I swung at it."

The host Trojans came back with two runs in the bottom of the first off a triple by Riley Janda who later scored on Royals' fielding error.

Roncalli junior Natalie Summers provided the comfort margin for Clark in the fourth inning with a powerful home run that struck the scoreboard and brought home teammate Carley Keller from second for a 7-2 lead.

"I had never hit a ball like that," said Summers of her blast. "She had been pitching me outside but this pitch was right down the middle and a little inside. It felt amazing when I hit it."

The Royals gave up one more run in the sixth on a walk, a stolen base, sacrifice, and infield grounder.

Clark said her curve ball to lefthanded batters and her screwball pitches were working. She has taken the main pitching chores following the graduation of Keegan Rothrock, a starter for the University of Florida.

"I'm a lot better at relying on our defense instead of trying to do it all myself," Clark said. "I realize now that if the ball is put into play, my defense is behind me.

CG finished the week with an 11-6 record, falling to New Palestine and defeating Columbus East.
